GOP House Bloc Launches Fight On Tariff Slash

WASHINGTON, April 18.—(AP)—President Truman received offers today of advance Republican consultation to avoid legislative shoals in the senate but encountered his first GOP opposition in the house, on the tariff question.

WHODUNIT?

Hotel Hoax Clears Lobby; Stops Traffic

The "six government investigators" failed to arrive according to Hoyle, but the hotel lobby was cleared, even of bellboys, the elevators stopped, and pedestrians along the street were halted in proximity of the hotel.

That briefly is a picture of what transpired shortly before midnight last night at one of Atlanta's large downtown hotels after a mysterious phone call had been received by hotel officials telling them the investigators were on the way, and the hotel's lobby must be cleared.

Shortly after the call was received, military policemen and shore patrolmen, one two dozen of them, reached the scene. They quickly cleared the lobby and stopped the elevators. The only person left in the lobby was the hotel's night clerk. He remained at his post undisturbed, but kept looking anxiously for the "government investigators."

Officials said it was the biggest hoax pulled—in Atlanta style—since Orson Wells staged his big broadcast about the "Men From Mars" invasion.

A delegation of Republican senators headed by Taft, of Ohio, called at the White House to pay their respects to the "loyal opposition" and to express their willingness to consult with the President "at any time where prospects of differences over legislation appear." A member of the group said Mr. Truman told them he would welcome such advice.

The tariff fight was renewed along historic party lines as the House Ways and Means Committee opened hearings on the administration's request for authority for further sweeping rate reductions. The 10 Republican members presented a solid opposition front behind Rep. Knutson, of Minnesota, committee minority leader.

HULL MAKES PLEA
Secretary Hull, former secretary of state, who left President Roosevelt's cabinet because of illness, urged in a letter that congress continue the nation's reciprocal trade policies in the name of world peace.

Mr. Truman pitched into his second normal working day at a rate only slightly relaxed from the breathless pace of his nearly 15 hours on the job yesterday.

Leaving his official residence at Blair House at 8:45 o'clock this morning, he walked briskly the less than two blocks to the White House, taxing newspaper men to keep up. Arriving, he:

1. Received the Republican senatorial delegation and consulted separately later with Senator

Reds Again Demand Bid To Frisco for Polish Group

WASHINGTON, April 18.—(UP)—Soviet Russia pushed the Big Three dispute over Poland toward a showdown tonight with a reported new demand that the Allies invite the Soviet-sponsored Polish provisional government of Warsaw to next week's San Francisco Security Conference. The latest demand came to Secretary of State Stettinius in the face of firm Anglo-American refusal to admit Poland unless its government is reorganized in keeping with the Big Three's Crimea declaration.

Pope Sounds Plea For Real Peace

ROME, April 18.—(UP)—Pope Pius appealed today for a "real and sincere" peace and warned the treaty makers that any departure from justice and fairness would harm both victors and vanquished by carrying the seeds of new wars.

His views were conveyed in an encyclical epistle addressed to the world episcopate. It was dated April 15—10 days before the opening of the San Francisco conference.

He invited all persons everywhere to pray for peace and for a sound peace organization.

"Unfortunately," his epistle said, "it is not easy while the world is so upset, while the souls of many people still are stirred by vengeful sentiments, to reach a peace based on equitability and justice, a peace suitable to meet in a spirit of fraternal charity the aspirations of all peoples, and capable of eliminating the latent seeds of feuds and rivalries."

Consequently, those who have the "very heavy task" of making the peace "need to be inspired by God."

"These men should carefully consider before God that anything which surpasses the limits of justice and fairness certainly sooner or later would greatly damage the victors and vanquished, because this would carry the seed of new wars."

"It is not sufficient to go around the altars of the Holy Virgin, to offer flowers and to make imprecations. It is also necessary to renew public and private customs, in order to lay the solid foundations upon which alone the edifice of domestic and civil life stand."

The Pope asked the peacemakers to bear in mind the refugees and exiles "who after a long time are anxiously awaiting a return to their homes, or those who, in captivity, in concentration camps or lying wounded in hospitals, are expecting a just liberty after the end of the conflict."

Pessimism pervaded the State Department as it became known that the entire Big Three commission for Poland had decided to fly here from Moscow for an important weekend meeting of Stettinius, British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden and Russian Foreign Commissar Molotov.

U. S. Amb. W. Averell Harriman and Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, Britain's ambassador to Moscow, were scheduled to follow Molotov to Washington. Since the Crimea conference, the two envoys and Molotov have tried vainly to reach agreement on a Polish government which would embrace most Polish political factions.

Both the United States and Britain have turned down one Moscow request that the Warsaw government be invited to San Francisco.

Stettinius, disclosing that Russia had sent a new note concerning the problem, refused to reveal its contents on grounds that he had not had time to study it.

The knotty problem, the biggest diplomatic headache inherited by President Truman, is expected to come to a head soon after Molotov, Eden and Stettinius sit down here this weekend for their first huddle since Yalta. Stettinius confirmed that they would devote most of their time to the Polish issue.

He said that no plans had been made to include French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault, who is expected here tonight or tomorrow for a stop-off on his journey to the west coast. The Big Three session might, however, call in Chinese Foreign Minister T. V. Soong, who is here, for a pre-conference meeting.

The disclosure that Harriman and Clark Kerr will join Stettinius, Molotov and Eden here made it obvious that the stalemate has been transferred here for an attempt at 11th-hour agreement.

MAY 13 SET ASIDE AS MOTHER'S DAY

WASHINGTON, April 17.—(UP)—President Truman today proclaimed Sunday, May 13, as Mother's Day.

He said that it is appropriate during the war's greatest intensity to "acknowledge anew our gratitude, love and devotion to the mothers of America."

"I urge that by our prayers, by our devotion to duty and by evidences of affection, we give expression to our love and reverence for America's mothers."

Li. Will Rogers Jr. Wounded in Action

WASHINGTON, April 18.—(AP)—Lt. Will Rogers Jr., former California member of Congress and son of the cowboy humorist, has been wounded in action.

Rogers telegraphed his wife here that he had been hospitalized but that his wound was not serious. The message gave no details as to time or place.

Rogers was with the First Army in Germany after participating in the Normandy invasion. He won the Bronze Star in the battle of the bulge.

Robbery Suspect Admits Aiding Pair in Two Killings, Police Say

Charges of suspicion of robbery, docketed at police headquarters against three young white men, have been changed to suspicion of murder as the result of an alleged confession by one of the trio.

Detectives C. L. Taylor and Frank White, assigned by Superintendent J. A. McKibben to investigate the slugging deaths of F. G. Campbell, 430 Washington street, and Raymond Campus, 1083 Lee street, S. W., who died last week after being beaten and robbed, announced yesterday that Ulysses Wilson, 22, of a Washington street address, one of the trio under arrest, had admitted participating in the slayings.

The detectives said he named Robert L. Parker, 20, and C. H. Fischer, 25, both giving Richardson street addresses, as participants in a series of robbery assaults which resulted in the death of the two men.

Wilson, Parker and Fischer were arrested several days ago by Patrolmen E. L. Sikes and E. O. Mullen after Miss Lois Tuggle, of 652 Memorial drive, S. E., and C. W. Tribble, 66, of 2265 Sutton street, S. E., had reported they had been robbed on Hunter street.

SPAIN BANS NAZI LANDINGS

MADRID, April 18.—(AP)—The Spanish government, acting upon the request of the United States, agreed tonight to prohibit landings of German planes of all types in Spanish territory, effective at midnight tonight.

Robbery Suspect Admits Aiding Pair in Two Killings, Police Say

Miss Tuggle said she was walking near Pryor street when three white men forcibly took her purse from her, while Tribble said three men knocked him down, beat and robbed him.

Both Miss Tuggle and Tribble had identified the trio under arrest, Sikes and Mullen announced.

Noting the similarity between the attacks on Miss Tuggle and Tribble, and those on Campus and Campbell, Superintendent McKibben instructed Taylor and White to thoroughly investigate the trio.

Patton's Tank-Riders Battle Inside Slovakia

By GAYLE TALBOT,
Associated Press War Editor.

The 90th Infantry Division of Lt. Gen. Patton's Third American Army has plunged across the Czechoslovak frontier into the Sudetenland, cutting Germany in half, and nine Russian armies totaling 2,500,000 men were reported last night driving into the eastern approaches of Berlin. Patton's troops, winners of the historic race across Hitler's Reich, penetrated at least two miles into Czechoslovakia within a few hours after crossing the border east of the German city of Hof. Nazi forces in northern Germany still had a passageway open to their vaunted stronghold in the Bavarian Alps—across Czechoslovakia—but it was a fast-narrowing gantlet they had to run under the heavy blows of the Allied air forces.

A force of 750 American heavy bombers smashed at enemy transport and airfields in Czechoslovakia and southern Germany. Nearly 1,000 British heavy bombers attacked Germany's North Sea island fortress of Helgoland, where most of Hitler's remaining submarines are believed to be sheltering.

BERLIN SEEN ABLAZE

The Germans announced that Russian First Ukraine Army tanks, in a 47-mile breakthrough west of the Neisse river, had slashed within 44 miles of a junction with the Americans and threatened imminently to undermine Berlin's hard-pressed eastern defenses from the south.

At the same time another Russian Army was reported by the Nazis to be spearheading across the lower Oder river onto the plains northeast of Berlin, while still another tremendous Soviet force, using new "breakthrough" tanks and automatic weapons firing 325 shells a minute, was advancing 18 to 20 miles east of the capital. Front line correspondents said huge fires could be seen inside the capital.

Moscow remained silent concerning the Oder-Neisse fronts, but by German accounts the eastern front was aflame along a 200-mile stretch from the Baltic to the Czechoslovak border.

The historic crossing into the Sudetenland, which Hitler annexed in 1938, was made north of Asch by troops of Patton's 90th Infantry Division, riding in jeeps and on the backs of tanks. Last night they were reported two miles inside Czechoslovakia in the vicinity of Gott-Mannsdorf, 10 miles east of the German city of Hof.

LEIPZIG FALL NEAR

The last eight miles of the plunge to the border was made without opposition—symbolical of the present low state of Nazi arms—but a front dispatch said brisk fire was encountered after Patton's men and armor had crossed the line southwest of Chemnitz, at the western tip of Czechoslovakia.

Front dispatches last night said the historic city of Leipzig might fall within hours to Lt. Gen. Hodges' First Army. On the sixth day of the siege of this city of more than 700,000 population, American forces had driven to the Elsterbecken Canal and the Pleisse river, deep within Leipzig.

Magdeburg, the ruined industrial metropolis on the west bank of the Elbe river, was cleared by Lt. Gen. Simpson's Ninth Army after two days of bitter fighting.

U. S. Strikes Again At Mindanao in Moro Gulf Landing

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Striking again at Mindanao, second largest island in the Philippines, American liberation troops of the 24th Division landed Tuesday on the northeast shore of Moro gulf, Gen. MacArthur announced today.

The Americans already had gained control of Zamboanga peninsula to the west of the new landing, in an invasion March 10.

The Tuesday invasion, aimed at gathering the only major Philippine island not under American domination was made with air and naval support. The U. S. landings at Malabang and Parang secured a three-mile beachhead.

MacArthur said Japanese forces remaining on Mindanao were estimated at 50,000. Constant Filipino guerrilla attacks on the enemy aided the invasion.

On Luzon, 33d Division forces are meeting bitter resistance in clearing Japanese from their cave positions on the outskirts of Baguio, Philippine summer capital in the northern mountains.

Philippine-based bombers continued their blows at Formosa, hitting installations at Taihoku town and airbases to the north with 360 tons of bombs, while patrol planes sank a 10,000-ton Japanese tanker and damaged eight other vessels around the island.

Marianas-based Superforts bombed six principal airbases on Kyushu, southern Japan home island, yesterday for the second straight day of B-29 neutralization raids on airfields from which Japanese planes have attacked American invasion forces at Okinawa.

It also was the fifth consecutive day of raids on Japan by B-29s, fighter planes from the Army's Iwo Jima fields, or U. S. carrier aircraft.

The Tuesday and Wednesday Kyushu strikes, made in each case by possibly 150 Superforts, were delivered against considerable anti-aircraft fire, but little aerial opposition.

American casualties of 7,995, including 1,467 killed, were reported by the Navy for the Okinawa campaign and associated strikes against Japan.

This included, for Navy alone, 989 killed, 2,220 wounded and 1,491 missing. For the Army and Marines, the figures showed 478 killed, 2,457 wounded and 269 missing.

Adm. Nimitz said the casualties were as of April 18—"the most recent reports available."

Ernie Pyle, War Writer, Killed By Jap Sniper on Island of Ie

By DOUGLASS WALLOP.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—(UP)—Ernie Pyle, a skinny, humble little guy who spent the war he hated writing about the foxhole GIs he loved, has been killed by a Japanese machinegun bullet.

The common man's writer and famous war correspondent who conveyed the tragedy and misery in simple, pungent words, met death on Ie, a little island off Okinawa, standing beside the foot soldiers who accepted him as one of them.

United Press dispatches from Guam said that Pyle was singled out by a Japanese machinegunner and killed instantly at 10:15 a. m. today, Guam time—Tuesday night, United States time.

President Truman, congressmen, high government officials, governors, generals and admirals joined GIs and United States Navy officers and men throughout the world in mourning the death of the 44-year-old Scripps-Howard columnist who often wrote about little people because he liked little people.

His death was announced by Secretary of the Navy Forrestal who had been conferring in an already bereaved White House with Mr. Truman, Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of State Stettinius.

The President immediately wrote a statement in which he said that a nation already grieving for its late President was "saddened again by the death of Ernie Pyle."

"No man in this war has so well told the story of the American fighting man as American fighting men wanted it told," he added. "He deserves the gratitude of all his countrymen."

Expressions of congressional tribute and regret were summed up by Sen. Carl A. Hatch, of New Mexico, the state in which Pyle maintained his home with "that girl"—his wife.

"Ernie Pyle will not die," Hatch said. "No Japanese bullet can kill the spirit which will live in his writings."

U. S. Army Strength Totals 8,050,011 at End of 1944

WASHINGTON, April 18.—(AP)—The War Department reported today that the Army was 8,050,011 strong at the end of 1944 and that New York led the states in the number of residents in service.

A tabulation put the Army's strength at 513,410 on Oct. 31, 1940. From that time until Dec. 31, 1944, inductions, enlistments and appointments totaled 9,444,283, while separations from service in the same period amounted to 1,907,682.

New York, as of Dec. 31, has 900,563 in service, including 17,563 WACs and nurses, while Pennsylvania had 663,666, including 11,666 women. Illinois ranked third with 507,233, of whom 8,233 were women.

A table giving round figures on Army strength of states in the south as of Dec. 31; the net accessions (inductions, etc.) from Nov. 1, 1940 to Dec. 31, 1944, and total separations during that period follows (the strength figure takes into consideration the number in service on Nov. 1, 1940, and does not represent the difference between net accession and separations):

PATTON HALVES GERMANY—U. S. Third Army troops have entered Czechoslovakia (shaded area) at an unspecified place, possibly near Plauen, it was reported yesterday. the party's regards to the President "and to express to him the conference's willingness to have him call us at any time to consult with him on any subject."

Sen. White, of Maine, the minority leader, said Mr. Truman told the group he would welcome the advice of the Republican leaders. Others in the delegation were Senators Wherry, of Nebraska, party whip; Austin, Vermont; Bridges, New Hampshire; Bushfield, South Dakota; Millikin, Colorado, and Brooks, Illinois.

Later, Sen. Aiken of Vermont called on his Republican colleagues to back the Roosevelt legislative program which Mr. Truman has announced he wants enacted. Among measures Aiken said Republicans ought to support were the Bretton Woods monetary agreements, extension of reciprocal trade agreements authority, the world food and agricultural authority, a nondiscriminative world communications system and a program of "freedom and competition" in air transportation.

TOBEY AGREES
Sen. Tobey, Republican, New Hampshire, expressed his agreement with principles stressed by Aiken, declaring:

"It isn't enough these days to go on the thesis of live and let live. The principle we must expound is live and help live."

A Democratic senatorial conference to review the effect of the change in presidents on the legislative situation was called for tomorrow by Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky. Barkley told reporters he is certain President Truman, a former colleague, will receive the full legislative support of Democratic senators.

Postmaster General Walker told reporters after his conference with Mr. Truman that he would remain in the cabinet "for the time being."

in which flame-throwing tanks were used to burn out the last fanatical Hitler Youth snipers. Three divisions of the Seventh Army were pushing steadily into Nuernberg, in the south, against bitter opposition.

TERRIFIC SHELLING
In their common objective, the Russians only announced gains in a two-day drive into Czechoslovakia, both aimed at the arsenal city of Brunn (Brno) extension of the wedge pushing northward from Vienna; and continuation of a fight to exterminate the German garrison of Pillau, last Nazi-held ground on the Samland peninsula of East Prussia.

Berlin Correspondent Fritz Koeltz said the Russians were using artillery to an "unimaginable extent" in their advance on Berlin from the east, and estimated that the Red Army had fired more than 10,000 tons of shells in the sector between Frankfurt and the Oder bend during the first three days of the attack which started early Monday.

By German accounts the Russians were converging in an arc extending from Eberswalde, 18 miles northeast of the capital through Bad Freienwalde, Wriezen, Neutribben, Alt Friedland, Walkow, Diederdorf and an area between Muellrose and Beeskow, 26 miles southeast of Berlin.

Late last night the Germans added that new forces were moving into the area west of Zehden, which is 32 miles northeast of Berlin. The Nazis said that from Stettin to Goerlitz, 2,500,000 Russians were on the offensive.

BRITISH NEAR HAMBURG

The British Second Army in northern Germany drove within 18 miles of Hamburg and within eight miles of the Elbe river through weakening Nazi resistance.

Canadian troops in Holland reached the Zuider Zee, in the north, and pressed steadily toward the big cities of Amsterdam, Rotterdam and Utrecht, despite the flooding of vast sections by the Germans.

Only 125 square miles of the Ruhr pocket remained to be wiped out. Dueseldorf, last important city in the Ruhr region, was about to fall to American airborne troops. Already more than 300,000 prisoners had been taken in the trap, with perhaps another 50,000 still to be bagged.

The Germans also reported a terrific tank battle between Cottbus, 49 miles southeast of Berlin, and Goerlitz, near the Saxon border, where the Russians apparently were thrusting westward for a line up with the U. S. Third Army in the Leipzig area.

Commentator Walter Esterman, of the German Transocean Agency, told of the big advance in the south by Marshal Konev's First Ukrainian forces, which he said had plunged 29 miles west of the Spre river and 47 miles west from the Neisse to Finsterwalde. That town is 44 miles east of the American First Army at Wurzen, and 50 miles south of Berlin.

Earlier the German radio had predicted that if such a breakthrough occurred the Russians would swing onto Berlin, and Esterman today said that would bring the frontal defenses on the Oder crashing down."

TWO NAZI POWS PLACED ON TRIAL

FORT SMITH, Ark., April 18.—(AP)—Court-martial of two German prisoners of war charged with sabotage was begun at Camp Chaffee today. Capt. James Brown, public relations officer, announced.

The PRO identified the prisoners as Heinz Bartel, 19, and Heinrich Wideman, 20, and said they are accused of damaging 35 tires assigned to loading vehicles at Camp Chaffee by driving nails into them.

The War Department previously announced that this is the third case in which German prisoners of war have been charged with sabotage at American Army camps.

Twenty-fourth Corps doughboys made substantial gains on little Ie island, just off Okinawa's west coast, yesterday, third day of the invasion. 7 Indicted After Raid on Tourist Court

By DAVID SNELL, Constitution Staff Correspondent.

MARIETTA, April 18.—True bills were returned today by the Cobb county grand jury against Edgar Anderson and six employees arrested following a Saturday midnight raid by members of the sheriff's department on the Stonewall tourist court seven miles south of here.

In charging the grand jury, Judge J. H. Hawkins had pointed out to the jurors their obligations to the people of the county in fighting moral degradation. He called the attention of the jurors to a story that appeared Monday in The Constitution relative to the Stonewall raid and asked that they make a thorough investigation of the tourist camp.

Anderson, widely known Cobb countian, was indicted on three counts. He was charged with (1) operating a lewd house; (2) with receiving persons for immoral purposes, and (3) with leasing the Stonewall courts to W. H. Carson knowing that the cabins were being used for lewd purposes.

CARSON INDICTMENT

Carson was also indicted on three counts. The grand jury indicted each of five Negro attendants of the Stonewall on two counts—(1) keeping a lewd house, and (2) receiving men and women for immoral purposes.

In a sensational raid that rounded up 20 couples, Chief Deputy Harry Scoggins led six deputies into the Stonewall court at midnight Saturday. Only one couple questioned was married.

The officers brought the men and women, representing a wide range in ages, into the sheriff's office. Some women cried and one fainted.

For two days the telephone rang frequently in the sheriff's office as suspicious citizens sought to check up on their husbands and wives who were not at home on the night of the raid.

36 PLEADED GUILTY
Of the 40 arrested, sheriff's records show, guilty pleas were entered by 36, who paid fines of $50 each. One couple proved they were married and one couple escaped.

On Monday the officers checked the two Atlanta addresses given by the escaped pair. One was the Ponce de Leon baseball park; the other was a church.

Since the raid the Stonewall has not been open for business. A large sign in front explains that the cabins are "closed for repairs."

"I leased the court to Carson in November, 1944," Anderson yesterday told newspapermen. "I have not been in charge of operations there since that date, and I didn't know what was going on there."

SYDNEY, Thursday, April 19.—(UP)—Wilbur Forrest, of the New York Herald Tribune, and Ralph McGill, editor of The Atlanta Constitution, members of the Freedom of the Press Committee of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, left for Canberra today to meet with Prime Minister Curtin and other members of the Australian government.

Before leaving Sydney, both Forrest and McGill endorsed a proposal for a world-wide conference of newspapermen to be held in Australia, a plan which has been urged by the Sydney Daily Telegraph.

They said an international press meeting was urgently needed and added that they felt that it should not be held in England or the United States but that Australia would be a logical place since it is outside controversy in the field of competitive news.

BUY THOSE BONDS—Lt. Daniel Briley, of Thomasville, is shown urging the students at O'Keefe Junior High school to buy bonds and stamps, their share in democracy. He told of his experiences in fighting the Japs in the Pacific area, and predicted stiffer fighting in future.

WHERE MONEY GOES

Pacific Vet Urges Pupils To Buy Bonds

Youthful investors who have put their nickels and dimes and quarters into Uncle Sam's coffers heard a sort of treasurer's report from Lt. Daniel Briley at O'Keefe Junior High school yesterday.

He told how their money, in the form of war bonds, had bought guns and war materials to fight the Japs in the Pacific. Speaking from his own experience as a sergeant with the Coast Artillery and later as a lieutenant in the infantry, Lt. Briley told about the campaigns in the Dutch East Indies, Papua and New Guinea.

Remembering 34 days of nothing but K rations, days when shells fell in the midst of wounded men in the aid shelters, of killing Japs with hand grenades, and seeing cornered Japs blow themselves to pieces with their own grenades, the native of Thomasville spoke forcefully and in language his young listeners could understand.

Following his talk, in behalf of the Georgia War Finance Committee of the Treasury Department, Briley answered questions posed by the O'Keefe students. "Did you ever kill any Japs? Can they really fight good? Did you put razor blades in tree trunks to keep them from climbing 'em?"

Briley is now on duty at Camp Wheeler, as an instructor in infantry training subjects, having returned to this country in January.

He concluded, urging his hearers to continue to buy war bonds and stamps in the Seventy War Loan, which will begin May 14. On the platform with the lieutenant were Stanley Hasting, school principal and school chairman of the WFC 16th district; Tom Camp, assistant state chairman; F. E. Barron, chairman, war savings and bond sales in schools of Georgia; and Joseph Woodruff, head of the agricultural division, WFC.

Dr. Caldwell New Chief for United War Fund

Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia, was named state chairman of the United War Fund of Georgia yesterday, succeeding E. B. Emrey who has headed the organization since its beginning in 1943. Emrey will serve as chairman of the executive committee.

Some 50 Georgians attended a luncheon at the Piedmont hotel yesterday to map plans for the 1943 campaign, slated for October. The UWF conducts one campaign annually for the USO, United Seaman's Service, War Prisoners' Aid, and 19 other war relief agencies such as Russian, Chinese, Greek and British War Relief.

Gov. Arnall is honorary chairman, and other officers are Louise L. Morris, publicity director; Dr. Herman L. Turner, chairman, speaker's bureau; Donald Oberdorfer, chairman, finance committee; E. T. Johnson, treasurer; Miss Janet Butler, secretary; Eugene Baker, executive director.

Baker outlined plans for an intensive drive to be carried throughout the state. He added that 25 of Georgia's leading cities have community chests which combine their campaigns with that of the war fund. Robert V. Titus, of New York, assistant campaign manager of the National War Fund, also addressed the group.

German Sailors Urged To Stop Ship Scuttling

LONDON, April 18.—(AP)—Declaring there "will be no Allied shipping available for German needs," Allied supreme headquarters called on merchant seamen in north German ports by radio today to prevent Nazi fanatics from trying "to create starvation and chaos by ordering ships to be scuttled."

"In the little time that is left before organized resistance ceases," the broadcast said, "the fanatics whose power has been broken from the Rhine to the Elbe will try to create starvation and chaos by ordering ships to be scuttled; by sending ships and crews into Norwegian ports; and by recruiting seamen for the Volkstrust."

"By organizing now, you can frustrate that plan and protect yourselves and your ships."

Cobb Editor, An Old Friend, Mourns Ernie

MARIETTA, Ga., April 18.—One person to whom the death of Ernie Pyle struck a little closer to home was Leo Aikman, editor of The Cobb County Times, who grew up in Ernie's home town of Dana, Ind.

"I used to see Ernie ride past my house on horseback when he was in high school," Aikman recalled.

Last October Mr. and Mrs. Aikman visited their home town, and had dinner with a pair of old friends—W. C. Pyle, Ernie's dad, and "Aunt Mary" Bales. The four talked a lot about Ernie, and the columnist's father commented on Ernie's refusing to appear on the radio for $5,000.

"Now, I just believe I would have managed to say a few words," Dad said.

Recently Aikman received a letter from a college classmate of his who had run into Ernie on Guam. He reported having asked Pyle if he remembered Aikman.

"Do I remember him? Sure!" he answered. "I know Leo well. The last I heard from him he was editor of a paper in Georgia."

Ernie 'Scared' On His Last Assignment

NEW YORK, April 18.—(UP). Ernie Pyle was frightened by his last assignment but he went through with it "because there was a war on and he was part of it," George A. Carlin, general manager of the United Feature Syndicate, said today.

Carlin, who had charge of the syndication of Pyle's column, issued this statement: "What all of us dreaded happened. Before he left on this last trip to the war fronts, Ernie Pyle confessed he was scared to death. He wrote he was going simply because there was a war on and he was part of it. He was going simply because he had to and he hated it."

"We all hated the thought of the risks he ran. He had been through so much from the beginning of the North African invasion up to the time after the liberation of Paris when he wrote in his last column from Europe: 'I am not leaving because of a whim, or even especially because I'm homesick. I am leaving for one reason only—because I have just got to stop. I've had it, as they say in the Army. I have had all I can take for a while. I have been 29 months overseas since this war started; have written about 700,000 words about it; have totaled nearly a year in the front lines... my spirit is wobbly and my mind is confused. The hurt has finally become too great. All of a sudden it seemed to me that if I heard one more shot or saw one more dead man, I would go of my nut. And if I had to write one more column I'd collapse. So I am on my way.'"

"There are several more columns written from Okinawa before Ernie was killed. This will be the end of a feature that I believe was the most widely read column in newspaper history. There were more than 400 daily and 300 weekly subscribers and new orders were coming in steadily. Only this morning I signed another new contract for the feature. The ABC circulation of his subscribing newspapers was about 14,000,000. All of those readers looked upon Ernie as a personal friend and feel a sense of personal loss. To those of us who knew him personally, the loss is nearly unbearable."

Forrestal revealed that Pyle was standing beside the regimental commander of headquarters troops of the 7th Army Division when he was killed.

Word of Pyle's death was received in the press room at Fleet Adm. Nimitz's headquarters on Guam. Nimitz privately expressed deep regret. A young Navy lieutenant summed it up. He compared the loss to that of Will Rogers, the cowboy humorist who died in an Alaskan plane crash.

Allies Thrust Ahead in Italy; Near Bologna

ROME, April 18.—(AP)—The Allied offensive in northern Italy slugged slowly forward today with Polish troops of the British Eighth Army advancing to a point within 10 miles southeast of Bologna, first major objective in the campaign to knock out the German armies in Italy.

South of Bologna on both sides of the Florence-Bologna highway troops of the Fifth Army registered small gains against fanatical resistance from enemy troops well dug in in scores of caves, tunnels and pillboxes.

Associated Press Correspondent Sid Feder quoted American officers as saying the suicide resistance being encountered was due to a proclamation by Hitler and Himmler that reprisals would be taken against the family of any soldier who surrenders or fails to fight to the last bullet.

Polish troops who beat down German resistance advanced two miles beyond Castel San Pietro and were locked in extreme fighting with the Germans who were fighting desperately to prevent the Poles from flanking the Bologna defenses from the southeast.

The aerial round-the-clock offensive continued with Allied war planes lashing at the enemy from the front line back to rear supply dumps, troop concentrations, and road and rail communications.

ways felt mildly surprised that fate had made him a war correspondent, was the second noted Scripps-Howard reporter to die in this war. Raymond Clapper, who wrote the complicated doings of Washington so simple people understood them, was killed in a Pacific plane crash early last year.

A Blue network broadcast from Guam by Jack Hooley, heard in San Francisco, reported Pyle was en route to a sector where there was heavy fighting when he met his death. In company with Lt. Col. Joseph Coolidge, of Arkansas, they were bumping along a narrow coral road in a jeep when

SEVENTH U.S. ARMY HEADQUARTERS, April 18.—(UP)—Lt. Gen. Patch, commander of the U. S. 7th Army, said tonight he was "profoundly shocked at the death of my friend Ernie Pyle."

"His great courage and deep patriotism were unsurpassed by our nation's purest heroes," he said. "Frontline fighting soldiers everywhere will mourn him as a personal friend. In him they have lost perhaps their greatest and most useful champion."

An enemy machinegun opened fire as they rounded a corner.

They scrambled into a ditch, the broadcast continued, and the gunfire ceased. After a few minutes they peered cautiously over the edge and there was another burst of fire. Col. Coolidge ducked back and, as he turned to Pyle, saw that it was all over for the homely companion of GIs from Africa to Okinawa. Death had come instantly from three bullet wounds in the temple. The colonel man aged to crawl to cover and made a report.

BODY RECOVERED
Pyle's body was inaccessible for some time. Finally, a chaplain asked for volunteers to bring it in and three tanks moved up. They were met with such steady fire that the men inside were helpless. When they retired, Cpl. Alexander Roberts, of New York City, volunteered to go alone. He crawled to the jeep and found Pyle dead, his face covered with his helmet. His left hand clutched a Marine fatigue cap.

Cpl. Roberts then led the chaplain and a litter bearers to the scene and they returned the body to the American lines four hours later.

Pyle's father, W. C. Pyle, lives in Dana, Ind. His mother died in 1941 while he was in England. His wife, Geraldine, received the news at her Albuquerque (N. M.) home. "That girl" rode with him on many of his rambling reporting trips around the country before the war, and often was the brunt of his gentle humor.

She was deeply grieved as was Ernie's father and "Aunt Mary" Bales, who was her nephew's favorite cook. A neighbor at Dana said father and aunt were not "taking the news very well."

Forrestal revealed that Pyle was standing beside the regimental commander of headquarters troops of the 7th Army Division when he was killed.

DEATH INSTANTANEOUS
"With deep regret," he said, "the Navy announces the death on 18 Shima of Ernie Pyle, whose reporting of this war endeared him to the men of the armed forces throughout the world, and to their families at home."

"He was killed instantly by Japanese machinegun fire... at the time of his death, he was with the foot soldiers, the men for whom he had the greatest admiration."

"Mr. Pyle will live in the hearts of all servicemen, who revered him as a comrade and spokesman. More than anyone else, he helped America to understand the heroism and sacrifices of her fighting men. For that achievement, the nation owes him its unending gratitude."

Word of Pyle's death was received in the press room at Fleet Adm. Nimitz's headquarters on Guam. Nimitz privately expressed deep regret. A young Navy lieutenant summed it up. He compared the loss to that of Will Rogers, the cowboy humorist who died in an Alaskan plane crash.

STIMSON DISTRESSED
Stimson was shocked. He said: "I feel great distress. He has been one of our outstanding correspondents. I'm so sorry."

Pyle's death was announced in the House by Rep. Percy Priest, Democrat, Tennessee, a former newspaperman.

"Another great American has fallen a victim of this terrible war," he said. "The entire country will be saddened by the loss of this great reporter. He interpreted the tragedy of war in a human way that endeared him to millions."

Speaker Rayburn said, "I think he was one of the great correspondents of all time."

They were eulogizing a man who, if he knew any big words, almost never used them. His simple sentences hit the man in the street and the college professor with the same warming impact.

Soon after war was declared, Pyle went overseas to write about the same farm hands, truck driver and day laborers he had talked with as civilians.

He lived and marched with death, many times narrowly escaping it, all the way from North Africa to Okinawa. He wrote about simple, everyday things—about mud, grime, sleeping on the ground, and always about the GIs in their foxholes.

SICKENED OF DEATH
Once in North Africa, some German divebombers came over. He dove into a ditch behind a soldier. When the raid was over, he nudged the soldier and said "Whew, that was close, eh?" The soldier didn't answer. He was dead.

He stuck with it until the Allies were driving the Germans out of France. Then he came home, leaving the front, he explained, simply because he couldn't stand the sight and smell of death any longer.

He didn't want to go back to war, but he felt he owed it to the men fighting the Japs to report what they were doing. So he went to the Pacific.

He landed on Okinawa with the GIs on the day of the first assault. He wrote about how happy he was that initial casualties were so light.

Pyle was a foxhole reporter. He didn't pretend to know anything about strategy or tactics. What interested him were the men in the dust and muck. That's what he wrote about.

Everywhere he went, he found fighting men looking for him. They told him their stories and he told the people back home. If the bombs came close, he told about how the men took it. If they were hungry and dirty and homesick, he wrote about that too. And he always got their names and addresses right.

His columns about combat troops won them an increase in pay. He thought that if airmen and others got extra pay for combat duty, the men with the rifles ought to get it too. Congress and President Roosevelt agreed.

Few of his readers knew it, but he got a brief glimpse of service life in the last war. He enlisted in the naval reserve in 1918 but never went overseas.

He didn't have the physique for war. He was slight, weatherbeaten, and balding. He was ill much of the time.

He was born on a farm near Dana. His full name was Ernest Taylor Pyle but he seldom used it. He went to Indiana University for three years but quit to become a newspaperman.

He worked on the Washington Daily News, and the New York Evening Post and Evening World before Scripps-Howard gave him the roving reporter job which he loved.

He held many honors. He was awarded the Pulitzer prize for distinguished writing during 1943. The Sons of Indiana voted him the outstanding Hoosier of the year. In October 1944 the University of New Mexico gave him the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters. The same year, the University of Indiana conferred on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters. Sigma Delta Chi awarded him their Raymond Clapper Memorial award for war correspondence in 1944.

He wrote three books. The third, "Brave Men," was the December 1944 selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club.

Mauldin Classifies Pyle as 'Good Guy'

ROME, April 18.—(UP)—Sgt. Bill Mauldin, famed soldier-cartoonist said today when he heard about the death of Ernie Pyle that "foot soldiers have long been accustomed to losing close friends."

"The only difference between Ernie's death and the death of any other good guy is that the other guy is mourned by his company. Ernie is mourned by his army."

World War I's Capt. Harry Truman Overruled Colonel for Sake of Men

This is the fifth chapter in a biography of Harry S. Truman, now President of the United States, written by Frances Burns, of the Boston Globe. Here, Mrs. Burns reports some anecdotes which show why "Capt. Harry" was adored by the men of the 129th Field Artillery Regiment in World War I.

By FRANCES BURNS.
North American Newspaper Alliance.
The boys from Kansas City, Mo., who made up Battery D of the 129th Field Artillery in World War I, were always spoiling for a fight. When they hadn't had a chance to fight the Germans they got restless but they managed to keep life from becoming too dull by stirring up a little intramural excitement.

It was a rainy night early in June, 1918, when the battery command was turned over to Capt. Harry S. Truman by Capt. John Thacher who was being made battalion adjutant.

"Capt. Thacher thanked us," Edward Meisburger, a sergeant in the first gun section, said not long ago in Kansas City, "and then presented our new captain, Capt. Truman didn't look much different than he does now. He wore glasses, held himself erect and spoke concisely.

"If you men do half as well for me as you have for Capt. Thacher, I'll be satisfied," he said, and dismissed us for the evening.

About midnight he was called by an excited adjutant. "Captain, sir, you'd better come over to your quarters. There's another civil war broke out!"

CRISP, EVEN TONES
When Capt. Truman arrived at battery quarters he found four men ready for the hospital. He spoke to the rest in crisp, even tones.

"It won't be long now until we're moving up to the front," he told them. "Most of you need plenty of sleep. Tomorrow morning we'll find out what this is all about."

But the next morning he still stayed away from them. Instead he called for his sergeants and corporals. He told them that he had plenty on his mind. That he had to concentrate on the mathematics they'd need when they got into action and that he was going to leave discipline to the sergeants and corporals. If they couldn't keep order, he'd get some new ones. There was no more trouble in Battery D.

"It was from that night that he began to be Captain Harry," one of his men said some weeks ago. "And if he ever gets to be President of the United States, he'll be Captain Harry to his old battery still."

The 129th as part of the 35th Division went up through the Vosges mountains into Alsace—Capt. Harry's nephew, Cpl. Harry A. Truman, covered the same territory with the Seventh Army in this war—took part in the first all-American drive at St. Mihiel, went through the first and third phases of the Argonne and was at Verdun at the end of the war.

MOVED AT NIGHT
When Battery D moved up from St. Mihiel to the Meuse-Argonne front, they moved at night, hiding behind trees in the woods along the road to be out of sight of German planes during the day. One night they had been walking all night and "were pretty tired and straggling badly."

Col. Karl Klennan, a West Pointer and a strict disciplinarian, overtook them.
"He laid us out for straggling and being sloppy," Meisburger relates, "and wanted to know who our captain was. We told him Capt. Truman, and he ordered us to double time up the hill ahead under full packs. Then he slowed down and we'd been walking all night. Then he rode on."

"Capt. Harry came up just after. He ordered us column right and led us into the woods. He told us to unhitch the harness and, get into our pup tents. Then he went back and reported to the colonel what he had done—that his men were too tired to go any farther and if the colonel objected he could have Capt. Harry's job. The result was that the rest of the regiment was sent into the woods to rest, too. From then, Battery D would've let him walk over them. They adored him."

PERSONAL COURAGE
Everybody has some story of Truman's personal courage and the accuracy of his mathematical calculations. One afternoon, one relates, our infantry dropped back and left Capt. Truman, who was at a forward observation post, about 300 yards out in front of the line. He saw a battery of German 77s firing on the 28th Division and telephoned back to Battery D with such accurately computed firing data that in two or three rounds, Battery D had made a direct hit and silenced the German battery.
"We were in the Meuse-Argonne seven days, back in the orchard, and we only saw Capt. Harry once in all that time," Meisburger said. "He was up at the forward observation post. One night he came back to sleep but he lay down with the buzzer under his ear. Our battery fired close to 10,000 rounds of shells in those seven days."

They never had anybody court-martialled after Capt. Truman took over the battery, though some of the men were given extra duty. There were, for example, the two men who got into a crap game in the woods on the second day of the Argonne and neglected to note the approach of a lieutenant colonel. Capt. Truman sent them with picks and shovels up ahead of the battery to mend the road.

When the men of battery D have their annual reunion on St. Patrick's Day in Kansas City, they remember how Capt. L. Curtis Tiernan, now third-ranking chaplain in the Army, sat on a stump outside Capt. Truman's office on the night before the Argonne drive and read confessions from most of the outfit. Neither Harry Truman nor Father Tiernan ever misses a reunion if it's possible to get to it.

And when, in recent years, his old friends wanted to know if "Capt. Harry" were due in Kansas City, they'd drop into a barber shop on 10th street near Grand. The barber in the last chair was Frank Spina, a native-born Italian who was an artilleryman with the 129th but set up his folding barber chair in Truman's canteen at Fort Sill and cut hair as a side line then and later overseas. He has cut Truman's hair for many years and when the senator came home from Washington, Spina would shoo everybody out of the shop and give his old comrade the works.

They say there were a lot of

"Harry Trumans" around Jackson county, named for him by men who served under him. One of Meisburger's two sons overseas had a letter from Vice President Truman. "... You sons of men who served with me are like my grandsons. If you ever get to Washington and don't come to see me, I'll have you court-martialed."

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backaches quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about a pint a day. When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes show there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

He Sang of Unsung Heroes

The entire nation feels a distinct loss in the death—in action—of beloved Ernie Pyle.

The simple, unassuming little man had captured, as has no other in this war, the nation's heart. His daily column, dealing with the unsung heroes of the conflict, brought the war closer home to millions and millions of readers. He had a remarkable faculty for putting down on paper the myriad inconsequential things which go to make a faithful picture of the whole. His was a rich talent and an unsurpassed feeling for his fellowman. He dedicated them both to the glorification of the plain GI, the enlisted heroes who all too frequently have gone unsung.

A Stronger Secretary of Labor Needed

Last year a special senate investigating committee officially recommended "a clear and understandable government labor relations policy . . . written into law and administered through one single agency instead of the dozen or so now operating in this field."

The chairman of the committee which made that recommendation was Harry S. Truman, now president of the United States. Moreover, President Truman has taken the position in numerous subsequent speeches that all bureaus and agencies having to do with labor should be integrated under one reorganized Department of Labor.

Japs 'Ain't Seen Nothin' Yet'

Disclosure by Washington authorities that the movement of American fighting strength from Europe to the Pacific has already begun should be sufficient reason for another cabinet crisis in Tokyo. The rapid crumbling of German strength has enabled our top leaders to move service forces' personnel and other units to the Pacific four months ahead of the originally anticipated schedule.

There will be disappointment for many in the statement that, while some of our troops in Europe will enjoy furloughs in this country, most will be shipped directly to the Pacific war arena, probably via the Suez canal. This is necessary and inevitable. It would not be practicable to bring the millions of fighting men home, prior to their transfer. Shipping limitations alone would prevent this.

While many have predicted it will take years to force the Japanese to the essential unconditional surrender, the progress of that war in recent months has raised logical hopes that, once the President Truman summed it up quite adequately when he said: "No man in this war has so well told the story of the American fighting man as American fighting men wanted it told. More than any other man he became the spokesman of the ordinary American in arms doing so many extraordinary things. He wrote about a people in arms as people still, but a people moving in a determination which did not need pretensions as a part of power."

The Constitution, proud of having been one of the papers in which his column was published, shares the deep grief of his readers at his passing. We feel, along with millions of American servicemen, that we have lost a close and valued friend.

Thus it is reasonable to suppose that shortly now legislation will be introduced effectuating the consolidation of all agencies dealing with labor into one centralized unit. In addition, it is logical to assume that he will name a new secretary of labor to head the reorganized department, the vacillating policies of the current occupant of that post having been in large measure responsible for the additional agencies which have sprung up outside the labor department.

These two reforms will add greatly to the esteem in which the general public already holds the new President. He cannot move too soon to bring order out of the confusion which now characterizes the labor picture.

full force of American and British might is turned against Nippon, the Japs will have to succumb in far less time.

Furthermore, it now appears certain that, as soon as the European fighting is over, Russia will join in the job of smashing the Japanese threat to Pacific peace. This action, again, should shorten the fighting time by many months.

Undoubtedly the informed leaders of the Japanese realize the inevitability of the doom that is shaping for the grandiose plans for conquest. The only question for them, now, to decide is whether they will accept the inescapable and end the slaughter by full surrender, or whether they will doom their country and its people to national hara-kiri by continuing the hopeless struggle.

In the meanwhile, neither the attacks by air, by sea or by land which the Japanese have thus far experienced are more than curtain-raiders for the hurricane of destruction coming to their home islands.

RALPH MCGILL

President Truman Off to a Good Start

(Editor's Note: Ralph McGill is en route around the world as a member of the American Society of Newspaper Editors' mission in behalf of universal news freedom. His column will appear as time and communications facilities allow. When it is not available, substitute features will be used, as today's by Ernest K. Lindley.)

The way in which the nation has rallied behind him must be most reassuring to President Truman. President Roosevelt was able to enjoy the feeling of almost solid national backing for only two brief periods: his first hundred days, and the first few weeks following Pearl Harbor.

But even during Roosevelt's first hundred days he was feared and hated by some. His entry into the White House brought changes in the political and economic balance of power which were fundamental. And many of his experiments aroused opposition from the start. By Pearl Harbor both he and his opponents bore many political wounds. These were only temporarily forgotten; they were not healed by the peril into which the nation was plunged.

Almost every new president for 60 years or more has been granted a "honeymoon." President Truman's, during the first days, is as perfect as any public officeholder could imagine. He is a man with no enemies, many friends, and almost as many well-wishers as there are American citizens, plus millions in other lands.

Not FDR Choice It would be glossing history to pretend that Truman was Roosevelt's personal choice to succeed him, if by personal choice is meant the man Roosevelt would have appointed if he had had a free hand. The quest of Roosevelt's political advisers before and after Chicago was for a vice presidential candidate who would not injure Roosevelt's chances of re-election. Although some of them may have had their misgivings about the President's health, they insisted that their sole objective was to re-elect Roosevelt. That was the point which Edward J. Flynn and others hammered in rejecting other proposed vice presidential nominees and insisting upon the choice of Truman.

But there were other Democrats with many friends and few enemies. Roosevelt would not have endorsed Truman if he had considered him unqualified for the presidency. Truman had been right from Roosevelt's viewpoint, on the essential issues, both international and domestic, and he had shown courage and intelligence and practical political ability.

Nothing is subtracted from the weight of the new President's responsibilities or added to his capacity to shoulder them by rearranging the facts about his nomination last summer. He himself has not done so or encouraged others to do so.

The new President likes to be called an "average" man, and in many ways the description is accurate. His humility is unquestionably sincere. But his words and actions during his first few days in the White House have shown that he has a quick and decisive mind. He has at least two qualities which do not exactly harmonize with the picture of an affable politician. He is blunt. And he often speaks with a rapidity which is especially noticeable in contrast with the drawl of the typical Missourian.

Good Impression At his first press conference, his answers were quick and sharp. Two or three seemed almost curt to correspondents who had not seen much of him in the senate. He may have put on a little extra steam, out of nervousness, or for the deliberate purpose of making himself seem incisive. His decision to conduct his press conferences according to the Roosevelt custom of permitting oral questions, instead of written questions submitted and culled in advance, took courage. The result of his first try was a businesslike, if not highly informative, session.

President Truman has had to make some quick decisions—every one of which, beginning with the decision that the San Francisco conference should continue, has been generally applauded. But he gives the impression that he will not be easily stampeded, that he will give his time in making up his mind about many things including new appointments. In his first days in the White House he has made, at close range also, the good impression which he evidently has made at a greater distance. He has got off to an excellent start.

Germans Still Adept As Propaganda Liars

The Nazis may be on their last legs. Germany may be tottering on the brink, just before the final fall into complete defeat, the Luftwaffe may be eliminated and the Wehrmacht smashed.

There is, however, one peculiar field of war operations in which they are adept. That is Goebbels' ministry of falsehoods. The propaganda department. They are still operating along the hopeless line of attempting to disrupt co-operation of the Allies. They are still trying to sow seeds of distrust among Americans, British, Russians. They still hope we will be gullible enough to believe the silly rumors and hints they put out. And, unfortunately, a few very few of us are just that gullible. And those few, who should know better, help the German cause by senselessly and needlessly passing along the whispered falsehoods.

Here is one of their latest tricks. It is revealed and explained here, just to put any who might be fatuous enough to believe such silly rumors, on their guard.

Low Priority Targets Occasionally, as the Allied armies have advanced across Germany, they have come across industrial plants which are less seriously damaged by Allied air bombardment than others. As a matter of truth, the reason for this is that the factories have been less important to the German war machine than others and have, therefore, been in low place on the Allied priority lists for bombardment.

For instance, Allied troops entering a town called Krefeld-Uerdingen were surprised to find some factories practically unharmed by Allied air bombing. These factories, however, were chemical plants producing only less vital chemicals, so it was far better for our bombers to drop their loads of high explosives and incendiaries on more important targets elsewhere.

But here is how the Germans tried to take advantage of that situation. They explained that the area had been allocated to the RAF bombers and had been spared because the Germans owned one of the plants had, before the war anyway, some English capitalists on its board of directors.

And, you may be sure, when British troops came across other plants which escaped the worst of the air destruction, they will be told that it was the U. S. Air Force which spared them because American business had an investment there.

In neither case, of course, is there any truth in the stories or their implications. As a matter of fact, no air force officers, from highest to lowest, in either British or American commands, know anything about original ownership of the industrial targets. They have, ever since the war began, been selected solely on their importance from a military standpoint. Anyway, the Nazis had seized all such industrial property long ago and it didn't matter who may, legally, have once owned the properties. They became simply part of the German war machine and of the Nazi loot when hostilities commenced.

Race for Berlin As this is written, both eastern and western fronts are getting mighty close to Berlin. According to German reports, the Russians have begun their final assault against the capital city and are not more than 17 or 18 miles away. While the American Ninth Army firmly holds its bridgehead across the Elbe at Barby, some 50 miles or so to the west.

One report quotes Stalin as saying the war in Europe will definitely be over by April 25 and the Russians will enter Berlin before the western allies.

And German radio is already trying to create more jealousy between the Allies by hinting that the side which gets to Berlin second will be jealous of the other!

I don't think so. I think we and the British will be quite pleased to see the Russians take Berlin. It will be a costly job, for one thing, and, secondly, the problem of handling the civilian population will be tricky enough it won't hurt our feelings to leave it to the Soviet Union. Furthermore, the Russians are tougher on the Germans than we could bring ourselves to be, that is all right too. The Germans deserve anything they get and none of us will weep for them under any circumstances.

Another Casualty Only Tuesday I was writing a column about Ernie Pyle as a literary stylist. This (Wednesday) morning comes a news flash he has been killed in the Pacific.

War can inflict the greatest personal tragedy of all, when your own is listed among the slain. I doubt that, for all of us, war could have brought keener sense of personal loss than in the two deaths of the past six days—Franklin D. Roosevelt, and now Ernie Pyle. They were both close to us all for the same reason, they were both champions of the little fellow, the unknown individual. Roosevelt as president and Pyle as writing champion of the struggling, hard-fighting, battle-winning, run-of-mine GI Joe.

Pyle was, undoubtedly, the best war correspondent this war has produced. He was great because, in his writing and in his philosophy, he had the genius of simplicity.

Fortunately, he has left two great books to perpetuate the record of this war, as he saw it.

There will be an unfillable gap on the page opposite this, in The Constitution, now Ernie has followed his beloved GIs to the eternal bivouac.

Justice And Revenge

How much of justice is revenge?

When the tables turned in France, and those who had served the Germans were brought to trial, the people who crowded the courtroom cheered the prisoners and applauded every sentence of death.

Revenge was sweet to them. Through four terrible years they had helplessly endured the most cruel oppression. They had seen their loved ones imprisoned, forced into slavery, tortured, murdered.

Now the guilty—the traitorous bullies who had so arrogantly served the conqueror—were to pay for the evil they had done. To the people it was revenge, but to history and the law it was justice—and justice under law is the very foundation stone of civilization and of liberty.

Punishment for transgression is a part of universal law. Eat a poisonous plant and you suffer; step on a coal of fire and you are burned; climb out on a tree limb that is too weak and you fall and get hurt. Primitive man learned by experience, as a child does, that natural law cannot be trifled with. Disobey it and you suffer. The reaction balances the action, and as is natural and inevitable as the return to earth of a stone thrown into the air.

Moral law is as "natural" as physical law, for it is a development and product of man's nature. Early in his history man learned that antisocial acts—steal, rape, murder—violated natural rights and threatened the security of the whole tribe. Such acts were taboo—forbidden by moral law—and the guilty were punished.

We like to think that proper men would be virtuous without bribe or threat, but mankind hasn't yet reached that state of grace. Virtue must still be supported by the fear of God or the fear of jail or fear of public opinion. Lift a man above the law, as a dictator is, and he becomes a cruel and licentious brute.

Some argue that man has no right to punish man. "Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord." So it is. But justice is man's responsibility. Stop the administration of justice—take away all fear of punishment—and our whole system would collapse in social and moral chaos.

Justice requires punishment of those who violate righteous laws. If we fail to punish wrongdoers, we ourselves become guilty of wrong and thus invite punishment. If we fail to punish bandits, we are punished by a natural process when they rob and kill us.

The Japs and Germans have committed the greatest and foulest crimes in modern history. If we fail to give them justice, complete and hard and merciless, we shall be guilty of a great wrong. And the natural and inevitable punishment for our sin of omission will be visited on our children in years to come.

RAINY DAY

(Claxton Enterprise)

As the various war contracts are closed down we will begin to hear more gripping. Those who worked for high wages should have laid something aside for the rainy day that is now in the offing; and a great many workers did envision a time when work would slow down and have laid aside some money in war bonds and in savings accounts.

He Knew Death Well But Never Liked Him

Ernie Pyle loved life. And the living.

He wrote simply, humanly of the simple, human things.

He was just a little guy, a little guy in the great maelstrom of global war. And yet he, through the eloquent simplicity of his words, has put down so faithfully his inspired impressions that millions scattered across the world today feel a personal tragedy at his passing.

"Anybody who has been in war and wants to go back is a plain damn fool in my book," he wrote a couple of months ago when he left San Francisco to take up his chores in the Pacific. "I'm going simply because there's a war on and I'm part of it."

He was a part of war, was Ernie, a very large part of this war. . . . And so, unfortunately, is death. He knew that. He knew that it was not unaccountable that a Jap bullet would some day write 30 to his unparalleled career. But Ernie had a job to do. And did it.

Ernie Pyle knew death. He had seen him often on countless fields of battle. He met him personally on yesterday. Death came and Ernie went with him. But there is no bond between the two. Ernie Pyle loved life. And the living.

Wallace, Garner Might-Have-Beens

WASHINGTON.—In considering the consequences of President Roosevelt's death, it is impossible not to be impressed with the sense of tragedy it must have had for two men, either one of whom might have succeeded to the presidency but for a strange turn of fate.

The two men are Henry A. Wallace and John Nance Garner, both former vice presidents.

Garner, now retired and living a life of obscurity in Texas, was deprived of the presidency by his own folly; whereas Wallace, present secretary of commerce, was cheated out of the office by treachery and a certain amount of political fraud.

Under the circumstances, Garner is a less pathetic figure in his frustration than Wallace, who must feel a certain bitterness over the cruel blow dealt him by his enemies. The same bitterness can hardly be felt by the Texas man because he himself proved his own undoing.

Back in 1940, when the third-term issue began coming to the front, Vice President Garner allowed himself to be deceived into thinking that he was the one man in the Democratic party who was big enough to take the nomination away from President Roosevelt. He was taken up on the mountain top. Various elements hostile to the President poured in and out of his office urging him to seek the nomination. In time he was taken in by it all.

Moved by the persuasion of these elements, he severed his old ties with the President and announced that he would be receptive to the nomination. At the Chicago convention which followed, his candidacy proved a complete flop.

The convention went on to name a new running mate of the President's choice, and Garner passed out of the political picture. Had he remained loyal to Mr. Roosevelt he would have been re-nominated and re-elected both in 1940 and in 1944, and without the slightest opposition. Today he would have sat in the White House where President Truman now sits.

Wallace Vice President Wallace's case is a bit different. Perhaps a part of his misfortune may be attributed to his own making, his inability to make friends in the senate, and his penchant for seizing on controversial issues. But mainly his failure to receive renomination at the 1944 convention was due to treachery and fraud.

President Roosevelt, after carefully exploring the situation, had determined that Wallace was the most acceptable candidate for second place on the ticket. He thrust aside the fears of some of his advisers that the Iowa man would cost the party a million votes in the election. Wallace was his first and only choice.

Unable to impress the President with claims that the vice president would be a liability on the ticket, Mr. Wallace's enemies then adopted a new method of attack. They sought to sell the President on the idea that Wallace had no hope of gaining the nomination, that he was certain of defeat. He could not hope to receive more than 200 votes in the convention, Mr. Roosevelt was told.

Finally, under the pressure of this group, Mr. Roosevelt allowed himself to be convinced. He then gave a second letter saying that Sen. Truman would also be acceptable to him. It was given on the assumption that Wallace was certain to be defeated and it would be better for the White House to exercise some guidance in the selection of a running mate than to take chances on the convention picking a man the President did not want.

In the convention Wallace got not the maximum of 200 votes credited to him by his enemies. His total was in the neighborhood of 475 at the highest before the changes started, or less than 100 short of a majority.

Subsequently, after his return from the Pacific, Mr. Roosevelt told Wallace at the White House that, had he not been deceived, had he known the real measure of his strength, he would have forced his nomination, as easily he might. He is positively known to have told the former vice president this. And he did so with a feeling of regret.

Thus, in this manner, was Mr. Wallace deprived of the presidency. But for the deception perpetrated on the President, he would have been nominated easily.

Mr. Wallace has a right to feel very wistful over it all.

Film for Posterity

Editor Constitution: With an eye on conveying to posterity the philosophy of life that guided Franklin Delano Roosevelt and our nation through the rough waters I wish to submit my humble idea to help and educate all America to carry forward the ideals of our greatest and most beloved president.

To help the world remember Franklin Delano Roosevelt as "Champion of the Little Man," much can be done by the major film companies and the American film industry to immortalize his indomitable courage and unshakable faith.

As a past member of the theatrical profession I suggest that the biography of FDR be put on film with the "Happy Ending" he worked, prayed and fought for, so that we may enjoy the freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom from want, freedom from fear.

A "Four Star Performance" with all proceeds from "premieres" to accrue to the benefit of our beloved president's dearest interest, "The Warm Springs Foundation," will represent a fitting monument throughout the years to come. I feel that producers, directors, and the stars will consider it a religious duty as well as a real privilege and honor.

Everlasting Monument

Editor Constitution: A great American, a world citizen, the champion of the democratic rights of men everywhere, an adopted son of Georgia came to the end of his mortal life in the hills of Georgia. As a Georgian in the uniform, I feel very deeply the loss that has come to our great state, the nation, and the world. A few minutes before I heard of the death of our chief I was reading an article in Time Magazine (April 16, 1945) titled "Voting Proposition." This article was written about a very undemocratic Georgia and its denial of the right to vote to many of its citizens simply because of their color. When I heard of the President's death I wondered if Georgia was really worthy of the honor that God had bestowed upon her—the man who stood as the very symbol of world justice, tolerance and the rights of human beings had come to the end of his fight with in her domains.

As citizens of Georgia let us highly resolve, as an everlasting monument to this great champion of human rights that there shall never again appear an article anywhere at any time, setting forth Georgia as a harbinger of those who deny its citizens the right to vote because of their color, religion or creed.

One Thing To Do

Editor Constitution: One of history's greatest has passed on. For Franklin D. Roosevelt was the greatest champion in our generation, of the dignity and worth of man. The profound personal and national sorrow of the American people were only partially witnessed by the solemn crowds grouping along the railroad track as the funeral train rolled out of Georgia up toward the north.

Death has brought to the entire nation a solemn realization of the significance and achievements of this great President. The Four Freedoms; the right of all persons to a full life, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin; the protection and expansion of basic American democracy and the building toward peace and security for all the people of the earth. For these principles he worked, and fought and died.

At this time of deep mourning there is but one thing left to do. That is for everyone to unite even with stronger determination in backing our new president, Harry Truman, to guarantee that the Roosevelt program will be carried out.

'Kind to Animals Week'

Editor Constitution: This week has been designated as "Kind to Animals Week," April 15 to 21.

On the face it might appear that humane-society people are asking our co-operation for only one week in the year; not so, they are veritably begging our co-operation for every week in the year, and every year of our lives. But for this one week they are bringing up the subject afresh for the consideration of all.

In this connection I wish that every household newspaper in the country could and would give space to a reprint of Sen. Vest's famous eulogy on the dog. If you don't read it in the paper, please get it from some source and read it.

"Age is not a matter of years. Many men of fifty are young and many boys of twenty are old."—Excerpt from psychology article.

In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to . . . you know what

While the old man's fancy leads him to some quiet little spot, To some rich and dim library where he patters with his books, Or a shady down-town corner where he looks and looks and looks. When the poet wrote of young men in his poem, "Locksley Hall" Telling how the vernal season caused the younger men to fall, He omitted any mention of the men of riper years, Of the ones whose domes were shining, who had whiskers in their ears, For the oldsters in that era folded up and sat around With their old ear trumpets waiting for the greater trumpet's sound. Not so in this generation . . . gramp is full of monkey glands, He can spin a dozen cart-wheels, he can walk upon his hands, Proving what some other wise one murmured in the long ago— "There is nothing good or evil, but our thinking makes it so." What a joy it is to know our thinking will preserve our youth— Let us grasp this great idea and absorb this solemn truth, If the mind controlling matter seems to fail us in the clutch, If we still must do our dancing with the walking stick or crutch, Let us keep the bright flame burning, let us never be dismayed As we bump into each other in the rolling-chair parade.

'Co-operation' Has Many Meanings

WASHINGTON.—It is quite a sharp transition to be whisked by air in 48 hours from southern Italy, where as everywhere else in Europe you look from airplane or car to see wreckage and ruin, back to this country, back home, where nothing like that mars the landscape that passes below in flying from New York here.

Everything was whole, peaceful and serene in the early morning just after sunrise.

It was quite a transition, too, to come back to a country where Franklin D. Roosevelt was no longer president, to find this city in the hectic stir of a new administration, with a new president, especially for one so long accustomed to the old familiar ways and the familiar faces in the same places.

The mind gets in a rut, too. The feeling already present that you had been away for years, caused by the dizzy impact of new impressions in five weeks in the strange surroundings of war, is intensified by the change that happened so quickly here, so that it all has the hazy, unreal quality of a dream despite the familiarity of the home scene.

It was encouraging to find the country rising so suddenly to leadership, for pulling together is going to be needed in the days ahead to win the peace and restore the country in the postwar period to a stable economy with jobs enough for everybody.

But there was one impression that stirred unpleasantly, not for what it is in actuality but for what it might portend. This came from the fine, easy flow of talk about "co-operation" between the President and congress, and requires some explanation.

That, in its best sense, is a fine thing and something very much needed. But that phrase "co-operation" between the President and congress has come, in recent years, to have a different connotation in some quarters.

It became the slogan of those who fought the New Deal and President Roosevelt, who wanted congress to dominate rather than the President. They were not talking of a working partnership. The co-operation they meant—and still mean—is co-operation by the President with congress.

They want congress dominant because congress in the last few

Truman's Ordeal

President Truman is entitled to the support, sympathy and tolerance of every American without regard to political affiliation for a sufficiently long period to enable him to take over the most complex government in all this world, to familiarize himself with the minutiae of the policy of his predecessor, much of which has been withheld from the American people and its congress, and to formulate his own position for presentation and action.

Harry Truman enters upon the presidency at the terminus of the European war, which, translated into American terms, means the beginning of the reconversion to peacetime living. In a sense, his administration must be an era of restoration, a return to American political and economic forms removed from the shocks of constant and frightening emergencies. His task will be to stabilize our economy, to make government an instrument of public necessities, not a master of individual welfare, to lessen state controls and to make an unhampered prosperity possible for a free people.

In this, he will be aided mightily by the course of events. Practical economists estimate that given any measure of freedom, American industry will produce at least five years of unparalleled employment and prosperity. The restoration of at least 27,000,000 automobiles to our roads, the prospects of new building, of supplying the backlog of household needs, the repair of roads, and numerous other tasks of restoration will provide at least 46,000,000 jobs, which is the statistical maximum of Americans available for gainful occupation. This era of restoration will cover the whole of President Truman's first term.

Yet, he starts handicapped, as any vice president suddenly projected into the presidency must be, by the decisions, the organization and the methods of his predecessor. And this is aggravated by Roosevelt's prolonged tenure in office and his penchant for personal government. Mr. Truman cannot risk a clean sweep of the new broom. He must discover the nooks and crannies of purpose and decision.

He is handicapped by an impossible cabinet. Out of 10 members six come from New York City: Stettinius, Morgenthau, Stimson, Forrestal, Perkins and Walker. Although Frank C. Walker is listed as from Pennsylvania, he is, for all practical purposes, a New Yorker. The south has no representation; the Pacific coast has no representation. Certainly, Harold Ickes is not a spokesman for the middle west. Under our system, the cabinet advises the President and he requires regional advice.

Again, from a political standpoint, such a cabinet cannot really support the President. Stettinius, Morgenthau, Biddle, Forrestal, and Perkins, are really non-political personalities. They have no political support in congress; they have no strength in any political party. Henry L. Stimson is a Republican, highly honored by his own party but no longer of influence in its councils. Frank C. Walker is the only organizer Democrat; Henry Wallace, a former Republican, is now the forefront of the left-wing group centered in PAC. Claude Wickard is a farm bureaucrat whose entire public career has been within the New Deal.

This did not matter when Mr. Roosevelt was President because cabinet officers were not associates, but assistants. Mr. Truman is likely to restore the cabinet to its proper prestige and authority and he will need politically strong men in it.

Mr. Roosevelt developed certain extra-curricular authorities, often referred to as "assistant presidents," an offensive term because of its unconstitutionality. To these men he delegated authority but no responsibility. Their position might be compared to the wizards of the orient. The most recent of these were Harry Hopkins and James Byrnes, the latter of whom resigned undoubtedly because authority without responsibility was offensive to his fine legal sense of propriety. Mr. Truman will, beyond doubt, drop this device altogether, but he will need to discover what the "assistant presidents" have been doing in the name of the President, and why.

We can afford to go slow and to give Truman plenty of time. He does not need to make a brilliant display. He does not need to prove that he is a suitable successor to Mr. Roosevelt. All that is required of Mr. Truman now is a sincere and American approach to the problems of restoration. And Americans will give him time and co-operation.

Conveniences Put End to Her Vacation

PENSACOLA, Fla.—(By Mail)—Now we know how prehistoric man felt when he started eating out of plates. It was a moment of mingled delight and apprehension—delight at discovering a novel, easy way of keeping his dinosaur stew off the cave floor and a dawning fear that perhaps acquisition of that plate was the beginning of a vicious system. And, of course, he was right. He got to own more and more things—with what result? Simply that pretty soon the things began to own him and he was no longer a free man, at liberty to splash in the streams or snooze in the sun as he pleased, for, naturally, that first plate just gave his girl friend in the cave ideas about owning Spode and Wedgwood.

We know because the blandishments of civilization are beginning to have their way with us. Three weeks ago when we arrived down here on Bayou Texar for a vacation the house, left two years ago when its owners moved to Atlanta, held only the most primitive housekeeping facilities. We rejoiced because it meant our housekeeping was necessarily on the primitive side. We fed the baby and stirred our coffee with the single teaspoon the kitchen offered, exulting because it meant only one teaspoon to be washed. We scrambled our eggs and fried our ham simultaneously in the one skillet, marveling that we hadn't thought of it in our three-skill days—serving ourselves a sad case of dishpan hands. We happily switched our playsets around in the water, dried them on the grass and donned them, content that it was impossible to iron them. But that idyllic picture is slowly and sadly changing. We are acquiring things. We have four teapots and four new dime store cups (with saucers). A misguided friend brought us a roaster and in a moment of opulent splendor our hostess found she had remembered to bring a table cloth. Worse than anything, we have an iron!

It all started when a station wagon-owning friend down the road drove by one day and yelled: "Put on your shoes, I'm taking you out to dinner!"

Naturally we were caught off guard, blinded as we were by the dazzling offer of food cooked by somebody else. We put on our shoes and our town-going clothes, conscious for the first time that they were considerably rumpled. We went out and ate deviled crabs and fresh-caught pompano—they seem to travel in schools at daybreak over by the Santa Rosa sound bridge—and at a point when we were beginning to forget that shoes burn your feet and stockings are itchy, at the point where we were having the very best time, we caught a glimmering of the beginning of that vicious system. We would be going out to dinner again; we would even be asking people to eat with us. That would call for cups with handles on them, and pressed clothes, probably.

Well, it was the beginning of the end of Utopia! One of her sorority sisters saw Rita at the fish market and tactfully mentioned that she had an extra iron. She was only too glad to let us use it. A relative tasted some of our boiled coffee one afternoon—the kind, you know, concocted in a gray enameled pot with the coffee tied up in an old rag—and insisted on presenting us with one of those complicated dripolators with four parts that have to be scrubbed and aired daily. (We had been burying the rag and the

Talk Was of Many Things First Night on Okinawa

This is one of the last columns Ernie Pyle wrote. Seven more are in the process of censorship and transmission and they will be published as received.

OKINAWA (By Navy Radio)—The company commander, Capt. Julian Dusenbury, said I could have my choice of two places to spend the first night with his company.

One was with him in his command post. The command post was a big, round Japanese gun emplacement, made of sandbags. The Japs had never occupied it, but they had stuck a log out of it, pointing toward the sea and making it look like a gun to aerial reconnaissance.

Captain Dusenbury and a couple of his officers had spread ponchos on the ground inside the emplacement and had hung their telephone on a nearby tree and were ready for business. There was no roof on the emplacement. It was right on top of a hill and cold and very windy.

My other choice was with a couple of enlisted men who had room for me in a little gypsy-like hideout they'd made.

It was a tiny, level place about halfway down the hillside, away from the sea. They'd made a roof for it by tying ponchos to trees and had dug up some Japanese straw mats out of a farmhouse to lay on the ground.

I chose the second of these two places, partly because it was warmer, and also because I wanted to be with the men anyhow.

My two "roommates" were Corp. Martin Clayton Jr., of Dallas, Texas, and Pfc. William Gross, of Lansing, Mich.

Clayton is nicknamed "Bird Dog" and nobody ever calls him anything else. He is tall, thin and dark, almost Latin-looking. He sports a puny little mustache he's been trying to grow for weeks, and he makes fun of it.

Gross is simply called, Gross. He is very quiet, but thoughtful of little things, and they both sort of looked after me for several days. These two have been

BOB HOPE

It Says Here

Not long ago there was a ruling that sport clothes were non-essential and wouldn't be manufactured anymore. The next day the California legislature immediately voted to secede from the Union. Nobody ever wears those conservative clothes in California. In fact, one guy showed up wearing a white shirt and he was shot as a Florida spy. The last time anybody wore a necktie in California was when the Spanish Conquistadores caught some guy stealing horses. Out here they wear sport clothes to get the full benefit of that year-round sun. Yes, sir, you never see a Californian without his cellophane hip boots. Everything in California is two-toned. I saw a brown Airedale the other day with his wagging half painted green. Those sports clothes are really roomy, too. They're so roomy, when I got in line to go to the movies, I had to pay the regular price while my pants got in before the prices changed. But I'm not a loud dresser, and to prove I'm not a loud dresser, last week I voted the best-dressed man in Hollywood by the California Neon Distributors' Association.

Suddenly downhill a few yards, we heard somebody yell and start cussing and then there was a lot of laughter. What had happened was that one Marine had heated a K ration can and, because it was pressure packed, it exploded when he pried it open and there were hot egg yolks over him. Usually the boys open a can a little first, and release the pressure before heating, so the can won't explode.

After supper we burned our K ration boxes in the fire, brushed our teeth with water from our canteens, and then just sat on the ground around the fire, talking.

Other Marines drifted along and after a while there were more than a dozen sitting around. We smoked cigarets constantly, and talked of a hundred things.

As in all groups the first talk is of surprise at no opposition to our landing. Then the talk drifts to what do I think about things over here and how does it compare with Europe? And when do I think the war will end? Of course, I don't know any of the answers, but we've been making conversation out of it for months.

The boys tell jokes, they cuss a lot and constantly drag out stories of their past blizzards and sometimes they speak gravely about war, and what will happen to them when they finally get home.

We talked like that for about an hour, and then it grew dark and a shouted order came along the hillside to put out the fires, and it was passed on and on, and the boys drifted away to their own foxholes or hillside dugouts, and Bird Dog and Gross and I went to bed, for there's nothing else to do after dark in blackout country.

Chaplin Ordered To Pay Carol Ann $75 a Week

HOLLYWOOD, April 18.—(UP) Charlie Chaplin tonight was ordered to dip into his $8,000,000 fortune and pay $75 a week to support rehaired Joan Barry's daughter until the baby is 18.
Superior Judge Clarence Kincaid also instructed the white-haired comedian to pay Miss Barry $5,000 to cover attorney's fees for her victorious two-year court battle to have him named the father of her 18-month-old daughter, Carol Ann.
Joseph Scott, 77-year-old attorney for Miss Barry, was speechless after Kincaid's ruling. He had demanded $1,500 monthly support for Carol Ann and $50,000 attorney's fees.
His eyes filled with tears and he turned pale.

UNITY DAY IN ATLANTA—Promoting unity, brotherhood and amity among the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish religions in Atlanta, Mayor Hartsfield proclaimed yesterday as Unity Day, and led members of his committee on unity in unveiling the first of a series of posters, advocating understanding and good will. Shown with members of the Commercial High school band, the mayor called for all faiths "to unite in the defense of our country and in the preservation of the American way of life."

Mayor Unveils Unity Day Poster

Mayor Hartsfield and his Committee on Unity have unveiled the first in a series of posters, billboard size, promoting understanding and co-operation among Catholics, Jews and Protestants, at official celebration of Unity Day in Atlanta.
The poster, which is on Carnegie Way, between Cain and Spring streets, pictures medical corpsmen giving blood plasma to a wounded soldier, deep in a Pacific jungle, bearing the legend, "Whose Blood Will Save Him? Protestant, Catholic and Jew. It's All American Blood."
Traffic halted on the block at noon yesterday for the ceremonies, with spectators spending their lunch hour listening to the music played by the Commercial High school band and to speeches by members of the committee. Rabbi David Marx, representing the Jewish faith, pronounced the invocation, followed by Dr. Stuart R. Oglesby, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, and president of the Atlanta Christian Council.
"Just as our great departed President said during National Brotherhood Week this year, 'One God is our Father and all of us are brothers and sisters of His family,' so we must foster this spiritual unity which makes us one people," said Dr. Oglesby.
The national crisis of the past week, continued Dr. Oglesby, has brought Americans into closer cooperation than ever before. We must carry to completion the work begun by our noble President. "United, we will go forward, led by the spirit of Almighty God, to victory and peace."
Others on the program were Mrs. Louie D. Newton, who urged Atlantans to give their blood to save the lives of Americans wounded overseas; representatives of the Army, Navy and Marines, Jewish and Protestant faiths, who read the creed and pledge on unity.
The Scouts were Clarke Beaudry, of Troop 52, Catholic; Bobby Ginsberg, of Troop 53, Jewish, and Harry Hearn Jr., of Troop 58, Protestant. Joseph Oberst, prominent Catholic layman, pronounced the benediction. Miss Anne Grace O'Callaghan, supervisor of music for the Atlanta high schools, led the singing of "America" and the national anthem.

3 of Pen Mutiny Defendants Testify Other 3 Are Guiltless

In an effort to obtain a directed verdict of not guilty for three of the six alleged ringleaders in the Atlanta penitentiary mutiny, two of the defendants testified at the trial before Judge E. Marvin Underwood in federal court yesterday that Myron Hinds, William Sanders and James Douglas took no part in planning or carrying out a conspiracy to capture the segregation building at the prison.
Jack Adams and George Hollingsworth testified that they plotted with Richard Arthur Myles to seize the building and demanded to talk to James V. Bennett, director of the U. S. Bureau of Prisons, after several unsuccessful attempts to bring their grievances to the attention of Warden Joseph W. Sanford. Their testimony substantiated statements made by Myles, who was on the stand Tuesday.
Adams and Hollingsworth further testified that they had no intention of escaping, harming the guards held as hostages or destroying government property, as charged in the indictment against them.
DISCARDED KNIFE, HE SAYS
During cross-examination by U. S. Atty. M. Neil Andrews, Adams stated he received a knife from Myles on the first day of the rebellion, but that he later discarded it "because I decided I didn't need it." Later, Adams said, he was given a razor, but he could not recall who gave it to him.
"Did you threaten a guard with the knife?" Andrews asked the defendant.
"Not orally," responded Adams. "You just pointed it at him and let him draw his own conclusions," retorted Andrews.
"You might put it that way," answered Adams.
"What conclusion did you expect the guard to draw?" the prosecuting attorney asked.
WHY HE SHOWED KNIFE
"I hoped it would not be necessary to show the knife at all," Adams insisted. "I wanted the guard to know not to do anything foolish."
"What do you mean 'anything foolish'?" asked Andrews.
"I didn't want him to try to attack me," replied Adams.
Adams again stated that he, Myles and Hollingsworth had agreed to get the guards' keys, and not to show their knives unless it proved necessary.
"How were you going to get the keys from the officer?" Andrews questioned.
"I was going to ask the guard for the keys—and tell him I wanted them," Adams said, "and give him the impression that we were strong enough to take them."
"And if he didn't, you were going to show your knife?" the district attorney asked.
"Yes, sir."
"And that's just what you did do?"
"Yes, sir."
Following the defendants' testimony, the government called Associate Warden T. J. Gough to the stand. Gough refuted Adams' assertion that Warden Sanford had beaten a Negro inmate about the face and head with a club.
Gough related that the Negro was not seen in his cell during a count of prisoners, and that when an officer entered his cell the prisoner attacked him.
GOUGH'S STORY
Gough said he was called to the scene after two guards were beaten by the prisoner and their faces badly mutilated. Warden Sanford was also called, Gough said, but neither he nor any other official struck the Negro, and the prisoner was not touched except when officials wrestled a stick and a flashlight from him, handcuffed him and took him out of the cell.
"Who hit the prisoner with a stick?" questioned W. Paul Carpenter, defense attorney.
"Nobody," Gough replied. "That was just a figment of somebody's imagination."
Also on the stand yesterday was Dr. George Hess, chief medical officer at the penitentiary, who described the prison's medical facilities and services. He stated that the mutineers' claims of inadequate medical attention were unfounded, and gave a detailed account of treatment given several prisoners who were used as "exhibits" during the insurrection of Dec. 4-7.
The trial will enter its sixth day at 10 a. m. today.

Facts, Fantasy Highlight New Movies in Atlanta

Thrilling facts and beautiful fantasy are unrolled today on Atlanta screens to give Atlanta movie fans another well-rounded fare of adventure, romance and music.
If it's fun and dramatic suspense you want, you'll enjoy watching the new leading man, Van Johnson, get caught "Between Two Women" in a new Dr. Gillespie film which opens at Loew's. Lionel Barrymore is back as the lovable Dr. Gillespie, and Marilyn Maxwell and Gloria de Haven are the ladies who keep young Dr. Adams in a stew.
Out at the Fox, Col. Robert L. Scott's story of his life as a Flying Tiger in China, "God Is My Co-Pilot," opens. The press agents say it's an inspiring, action-packed story, with Dennis Morgan playing the role of Macon's Col. Scott and Andrea King, his wife.
At the Paramount, the setting is "Sudan," and Maria Montez comes back on the screen as a pretty desert princess, who is saved from slavery by a couple of carefree vagabonds, Jon Hall and Andy Devine. Turhan Bey helps the trio as a leader of escaped slaves.
The Rialto offers a breezy, hula musicale, "Tahiti Nights," in the South Sea island mood. The plot centers around a young Tahitian prince who finds success in the United States as a bandman but returns to Tahiti to fall in love with a native princess, Jinx Faulkenburg.
Holdovers for the week are two dandy shows adapted from best-selling books. Betty Smith's "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" moves from the Fox to the Roxy with its tender and heart-warming account of the "Nolans" struggle for existence and its top-notch cast led by Dorothy McGuire and James Dunn.
Vicki Baum's "Hotel Berlin" was switched at the last minute from the Paramount to the Capitol, where a double feature had been scheduled. Faye Emerson, Raymond Massey and Helmut Dantine give an excellent portrayal of the Nazis' psychological reaction to the realization that the war is lost for them.

600,000 in U. S. Now Suffering Cancer Inroads

Picture a city twice the size of Atlanta—a city of 600,000 persons—and you will get an idea of the number of Americans who now have cancer.

At least 160,000 persons will die from this disease this year . . . men, women and children of every age group.

Mrs. Murdock Egan, state commander, Women's Field Army, American Cancer Society, brought these figures to the attention of Atlantians who are urged this week to donate nickels, dimes and dollars to combat cancer.

"Cancer takes the life of Mary Jones, aged 38, mother of two children, with a happy home. It claims Bill Smith, aged 46, successful businessman, useful citizen, with a wife and three children to support. No doubt cancer has killed someone you knew, perhaps someone you loved," Mrs. Egan said.

And yet cancer need not be a sword of Damocles, hanging over the heads of all Americans. "The answers are early diagnosis, early treatment," she pointed out.

The dinner, to be prepared by the high school's home economics students, will be composed entirely of food produced by the school's 80 agricultural students.

James C. Hanes, Winston-Salem, N. C., hosiery manufacturer, has been appointed to the Fourth Regional War Labor Board as an industry member, according to Chairman M. T. Van Hecke. He also announced the return of Harry D. Wolf, professor of economics at the University of North Carolina, as a public member of the board.

'Slur' on FDR Policy Causes Dinner Furor

WASHINGTON, April 18.—(UP)—A speech interpreted as a slur on the late President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt caused a number of persons to walk out of a dinner party here last night, President J. E. Marion, of the National Association of Home Builders, said today.

The speaker whose remarks were resented was a member of the association, he said, but his statement "did not in any way represent the views of the association." The speaker resigned his membership today, he added.

Marion described the dinner as an informal affair attended by some members of the association and their congressmen. He declined to give their names.

He said the speaker "started criticizing the Arthurdale Housing Project in West Virginia in which Mrs. Roosevelt was interested, stating that it was not the proper sort of housing project."

"He also said he had been down there and that he felt the whole thing was not practical."

"He said it was an example of the idealistic dreaming of the late President and Mrs. Roosevelt."

"His statements were in extremely bad taste, and a number of the guests were so highly embarrassed that they left the room."

Capt. Woodward Will Leave Soon For Pacific Area

Capt. Douglas C. Woodward, USNR, vice president of Georgia Military Academy on military leave, who made eight Pacific landings, has found a good use for Japanese air-planes — wrist watch bands.

A former executive officer at the Navy Pre-flight School, at Athens, Ga., Woodward yesterday displayed a wrist watch band made from aluminum alloy taken from a Jap plane brought down by American fighting men.

Capt. Woodward.

Leather and cloth bands just won't "hold up" in the battle duty, said Woodward, who will leave Monday for Washington en route to San Francisco for shore duty in the Pacific.

The GMA official, graduate of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis and a winner of the Navy Cross in World War I, has been spending a month's leave with his wife at their College Park home.

During this time, he saw for a day his son in the Marine Corps — Pvt. Douglas Woodward Jr., stationed at Parris Island, S. C. En route to Washington he will visit his son in the Army Air Corps, Lt. John Charles Woodward, stationed at Langley Field, Va.

In World War II, Woodward's first duty was in the north Atlantic. Later, he participated in landings on Kwajalein, Aitape, Hollandia, Guam, Peleliu and Leyte.

LITTLE ANN CLICKS AGAIN

Cattle Show Record Set Here by 10-Year-Old Girl

Ann Gregory, 10-year-old Murray county 4-H clubber, led a 1,050-pound Polled Hereford steer to the auction ring and broke a southeastern price record for slaughter beef when her 11-month-old bovine, "Chubby," brought $1.11 a pound at the 10th annual Atlanta Fat Cattle Show.

The grand champion was purchased by the Henry Grady hotel, and brought a total price of $1,165.50. The highest price recalled by old cattle men was a top of $1.09 per pound at a sale in Alabama recently.

The grand champion was termed the best grade Hereford ever sold here and brought renewed interest in the promotion of locally produced and raised cattle.

Average price for the show was 30.44 cents per pound. A total of $42,027.40 for 11,050 pounds of beef cattle passed through hands of packers and private businesses to 4-H and FFA youths. Of the 84 club animals sold, 35 were graded choice or prime and the low price of 20 cents a pound was the highest bottom price for a sale here.

JACKSON BOY WINNER

Still another record was set when the reserve champion steer, an Aberdeen-Angus raised by Carl Martin, of Jackson county, was purchased by the Upchurch Packing Company for the Melba Cafeteria, for 75 cents a pound. This was the highest known price for a reserve champion in the southeast.

A steer offered by Donald Russell, of Fulton county, brought 38½ cents a pound from the Citizens & Southern National Bank, and was judged the best-fitted animal.

Red River Flood Still in Acute Stage

NEW ORLEANS, April 18.—(AP)—The flood situation on the Red river below Alexandria remained acute while Army engineers continued their 24-hour vigil along the lower reaches of the Mississippi.

Part of the 8,000 families driven from their homes by the rampaging Red prepared to return as the water receded from Shreveport to Alexandria.

Further inundation was threatened at Pineville, across the river from Alexandria, and Marksville, La., where levees troubles developed.

At Memphis the Mississippi river dropped below flood stage for the first time in 39 days.

Duties of Church Theme of Report

"The responsibility and opportunity of the local church in its community during the postwar days" is the theme of the annual report of the committee on social and moral welfare of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States, to be submitted by Dr. Stuart R. Oglesby, chairman, to the 85th session of the assembly, May 24-30, in Montreat, N. C.

Dr. Oglesby is pastor of the Central Presbyterian church. His committee has presented such a report annually for the past 10 years. These reports, as approved by the highest court of the church, are then used as a basis for study and action in Christian social relations groups throughout the denomination.

The subject matter of this year's report will deal with the returning service men and women, racial readjustments, moral standards and practices, marriage and the home, and world order.

Senate Adopts Water Treaty With Mexico

WASHINGTON, April 18.—(AP)—The senate today ratified the Mexico-United States water allocation treaty, approval of which the State Department had urged as a preliminary to the San Francisco conference. The vote was 76 to 10.

President Truman hailed the vote as evidence the chamber stands behind the "Good Neighbor" policy.

The treaty guarantees one and one-half million acre-feet of Colorado river water annually to the Mexican state of Baja California.

It also divides the waters of the Rio Grande which arise in Mexico, so that the lower valley of the river in Texas is promised, although not guaranteed, 350,000 acre-feet annually.

The pact gives the present International Boundary Commission authority to build about 127 million dollars' worth of dams and power plants along the Rio Grande, with Mexico sharing the cost.

It also provides that the Davis dam, which is to be erected by American capital below Boulder dam, shall impound water for Mexican use. The dam is to cost about 30 million dollars.

Ten reservations, consented to by the administration, reduced the power which by the treaty, as originally written, would have been given to the International Boundary Commission.

The State Department said the treaty would settle the 40 years of controversy between this country and Mexico over water. The department said that ratification of the treaty, before the San Francisco conference would be interpreted as a token of good will and strengthen the hand of the American delegation.

Opponents of the treaty said that it would be a blow to one-half billion dollars' worth of public water, electric power and irrigation projects in Nevada and California.

They said that water projects in this country would have to be cut back in order to meet the terms of the treaty.

MY DAY . . . By Eleanor Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Tuesday.—Of one thing I am sure. When people's hearts are freed by sympathy and sorrow, it makes them wonderfully kind. I have had evidence of this during the past few days.

My husband's friends and associates have come to assure me of their desire to help me in any way. From all over the country messages poured in, wanting to know how they, the senders, could be of assistance. For the moment, of course, the only people who can actually do something are the people in our secretarial staffs under Mrs. Helm and Miss Thompson's direction. They have worked day and night and will continue to do so until we leave here on Friday.

The people who were on my husband's staff, his secretary, Miss Grace Tully, and the others in the executive offices, have a terrific mountain of mail to attend to.

Also under great strain are the ushers. With the help of the workers who bring a president's family into the White House and take them out again, they have to work on all the details, not only of removing such belongings as we may have, but of getting the White House in order for the President and Mrs. Truman. Then there are the staff of the White House, the housekeeper, Mrs. Nesbitt, and all the employees and their families, who must still carry on despite the people coming in and out.

Yesterday I took Mrs. Truman all through the White House. In the years that we have been here I have taken many people through the house, sometimes only in the formal rooms, sometimes on the family floor, very rarely to the attic and the kitchen. I always have a pride in the beauty of the rooms—their proportions, the woodwork, and the historically interesting furnishings, which remain the same no matter what individuals may live here.

One of my great joys has been in the flowers which were always around us in profusion. When the White House greenhouse was taken down, the other greenhouses in the city still provided us with all that the flower room needed to keep the White House beautiful. Sometimes it was gay, sometimes more subdued, but always the men who worked in that particular department have seemed to love and appreciate the beauty of the job they did.

The WORRY CLINIC

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE.

(Do you know the greatest sin of American clergymen? If your priest or minister is guilty of this sin, be sure to send him a copy of this case record and thus try to help him out of his error, for he is keeping more people away from church than gamblers and robbers, blasphemers and adulterers.)

CASE F-246: Henry L., aged 46, is a clergyman of a small church. "I recently visited a big city church while I was on a short vacation," he told his audience.

"And what do you think I found? Cushions on the seats! What has the church come to when it must coddle its members in this fashion?"

"Besides, I am against it because it lets the congregation feel too comfortable. Then they go to sleep!"

DIAGNOSIS—Why does Henry think God padded our buttocks with a great deal of fat, if he didn't expect us to enjoy some comfort while seated?

And imagine a clergyman finding it necessary to keep his audience awake by forcing them to sit on hard boards!

Why doesn't he give them some of the vital, dynamic oratory which Jesus employed and thus keep them awake by psychological methods?

What sort of teacher would I be if I had to force my pupils to sit on tacks in order to be sure they would remain awake for my lecture?

There were 65 million non-church members in this country at the time of the Pearl Harbor attack. Why weren't the majority of them in the churches?

Partly because there were too few good orators in the pulpits! "You must fill the pulpit before you can fill the church!" is an axiom that is still perfectly true.

CHRIST WAS AN ORATOR—Jesus pulled the crowds. It is recorded that he had 5,000 men in his audience, "not to mention the women and children." According to modern tendencies, this meant he had at least 15,000 in one audience, for women and children far outnumber the men at the usual church meeting.

How do you account for Christ's great crowds? Because he was the Son of God?

Not at all! His contemporaries didn't know he was the Son of God, or they would never have permitted his arrest, let alone his crucifixion.

Even his Apostles hardly realized his divinity until after his resurrection.

The laymen in the crowds came to hear Jesus NOT because he was the Son of God, but because he was a wonderful orator and a past master of applied psychology.

CLERGYMEN'S GREATEST SIN—He didn't give them a dry, sterile "essay" type of address, so typical of college professors and clergymen with an educational inferiority complex.

He used the narrative or "anecdotal address" and told them practical stories, for Jesus had "horse sense."

It isn't the sinners, therefore, which make Christ so unhappy today, as it is the poor orators in the pulpits!

A poor orator is lazy or stubborn, else he would read the New Testament and learn Christ's excellent public speaking formula.

A poor church attendance means the clergyman is at fault, for a good speaker can go into any such church and jump the attendance from 50 to 100 per cent within six weeks.

Send for my bulletin, "How to Make an Interesting Speech," enclosing a 3-cent stamped envelope plus a dime. It contains Christ's famous formula.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Constitution, enclosing a 3-cent stamped, addressed long envelope and a dime to cover typing or printing costs when you send for one of his psychological charts.)

Neatness, Suitability Chief Features Of Hair Styling

In the spring a woman's fancy lightly turns to a new way of doing her hair. Both long and short hair arrangements from the American Hair Design Institute are shown. From these one can see that neatness and suitability remain the chief features of new hair styling, and might well be used as a theme. A close scrutiny of these new hair styles reveals that all hair has a sidesweep or upsweep, but the arrangement always shows the shape of a pretty head and does something for the face.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS

March 21-April 19 (ARIES)—It might be well to give business and social associates every consideration before 5:12 p. m., for you are apt to encounter a let-down feeling, or meet with coolness which may retard matters.

April 20-May 20 (TAURUS)—Between 10:10 a. m. and 3:26 p. m. is the most favorable part of the day when you should look at the world in a practical, matter of fact way. This is an especially good time for general business and hard work.

May 21-June 20 (GEMINI)—The entire day is not auspicious for new plans, for you will have a tendency to underestimate values, or friends will not be clear in their dealings with you.

June 21-July (CANCER)—There may be a tendency to push matters or feel a high tension in your feelings before 3 p. m., so use care that you do not act rashly.

July 22-Aug. 22 (LEO)—Before 5:30 p. m. favors meetings, plans and projects. The period previous to 2:05 p. m. favors dealings with the opposite sex and the adoption of new methods in connection with your earning capacity and monetary policies.

Jan. 20-Feb. 18 (AQUARIUS)—The entire day previous to 8:46 p. m. favors dealings with those from whom you expect co-operation. However, moderation in all things is favored. The period after 7:34 p. m. favors social affairs.

Feb. 19-March 20 (PISCES)—The serious side of all things will creep into whatever you are attempting today. This is a more favorable day for attending to conservative matters, than for the frivolities of life.

Sept. 23-Oct. 22 (LIBRA)—Your ambitions and energies will be strong today until 9:36 p. m. when you will desire swift progress or want to be in a hurry. Therefore, you are likely to rush things too quickly.

Oct. 23-Nov. 21 (SCORPIO)—Before 10:10 a. m. take particular pains to make your motives clear to other people, unless you have a special reason for concealing them.

Nov. 22-Dec. 21 (SAGITTARIUS)—Between 11:25 a. m. and 2:45 p. m. keep away from speculative ideas and scrutinize any new project that may be brought to you for decision at this time.

Dec. 22-Jan. 19 (CAPRICORN)—The period previous to 2:05 p. m. favors dealings with the opposite sex and the adoption of new methods in connection with your earning capacity and monetary policies.

Jan. 20-Feb. 18 (AQUARIUS)—The entire day previous to 8:46 p. m. favors dealings with those from whom you expect co-operation. However, moderation in all things is favored. The period after 7:34 p. m. favors social affairs.

Glimpses of HOLLYWOOD

By SHEILAH GRAHAM

Jennifer in Remake Of "Little Women"

HOLLYWOOD—Jennifer Jones plays the lead in David O. Selznick's remake of "Little Women." Jennifer will have to work hard to be as good as Katharine Hepburn, who starred in the original movie. . . . And talking about Selznick, he has placated Ingrid Bergman who was straining at the leash for her contract with him, by allowing her the jaunt to Broadway for the lead with Raymond Massey in Maxwell Anderson's "Joan of Arc." Ingrid has been trying for a Broadway fling for the past year. . . . When Tyrone Power returns to 20th Century-Fox and civilian life, he won't have to wait for a movie—his next, "Don Q. Son of Zorro," is now being scripted and should be ready by the time Ty comes marching home. . . . More and more composers are getting the Hollywood treatment. With Chopin in the bag in "A Song to Remember"—and making money here are some of the other great music men you will soon see—and hear—on celluloid: Beethoven, Schumann, Schubert and Tchaikovsky. . . . Sounds swell already.

Jimmy Durante and Lauritz Melchior back for their picture, "Two Sisters From Boston," with June Allyson. When I asked June's boy friend, Dick Powell, why she was always on the sick list, he gave me the obvious answer: "She works too hard, plus—she hates to go to bed early." . . . Charles Coburn has played more genial old boys on the screen than anyone his size and weight. He adds a new twist in "Shady Lady" with Susanna Foster, when he portrays a nice old 'con' man. . . . It will be odd to see Humphrey Bogart working with Barbara Stanwyck and not Lauren Bacall—in "The Two Mrs. Carrrolls."

How to make money easily. James B. Cassidy paid $3,500 for the rights to "Green Mansions" four years ago. He has just sold the property to Metro for $150,000! The movie will star Elizabeth Taylor. . . . Columbia is re-releasing the Lone Wolf series, but without Warren William. I wonder what happened to Warren? He's a good actor, but has not made a picture for some time. . . . Dick Powell makes another suspenseful picture, "Cornered." . . . Carmen Miranda has obtained a long leave of absence from 20th Century-Fox for her Broadway musical, "Spring in Brazil." . . .

For the second time, Zachary Scott's illness has upset shooting schedules on "Danger Signal." It was postponed six weeks because he required a rest and the company (headed by Faye Emerson) is now shooting around the boy who is home sick with laryngitis.

I wouldn't be too surprised if Hunt Stromberg shelved "Young Widow." Not only has Ida Lupino bowed out of the cast, but so has her co-star and ex-husband, Louis Hayward. . . . On the advice of his friends, George Jessel will not play himself in "The Dolly Sisters" and will stick to being a producer. George has four pictures in or near production, and it will be interesting to see if he is as good a producer as he is an after-dinner speaker.

La moda Americana...Have a Coke

(THE AMERICAN WAY)

...an American custom as seen in Italy

People overseas are impressed by the American fighting man's friendliness among his fellows. They see his home-ways and customs—his good humor. Have a Coke they hear him say to his buddies, and they begin to understand America. Yes, the pause that refreshes with ice-cold Coca-Cola speaks of the friendliness of Main Street and the family fireside.

SALLY FORTH Says: School Set To Give Dances To Aid Pavilion Fund

Last fall Sally told of the wonderful project started by Mrs. Carroll McCaughey at her picturesque country home near Dunwoody, to build a recreational pavilion for men and women of the armed forces. The idea so caught the popular fancy that donations came in from far and near to add to the pavilion fund.

Now the high school set has taken up the idea, with the result that the Boys' and Girls' Panhellenic Council will hold script dances for the benefit of this recreation pavilion this weekend. The first dance will be held at the Atlanta Woman's Club tomorrow evening. And on Saturday afternoon the councils will entertain at a tea-dance on the terrace of the Billmore hotel, with a teen-age fashion show, sponsored by the J. P. Allen, 219 Shop, as an added attraction. Members of the four girls' Panhellenic societies will serve as manikins. The Phi Pi models will include Martha Mann, Joan Court, Jeannette Wilcox, Betty Jinks and Nona Chiles. The Pi Pi girls, who will model are Olga Turner, Mildred Broyles, Bess Lundeen, Betty Wilson, Nancy Jagels and Betty Ann Whitaker. The O. B. X. representatives are Joanne Long and Ann Bryan, and parading their beauty for the Sigma Deltas will be Pat Power, Emily Moeckel, Martha Johns, Corinne Carpenter and Marie Clair Gunning.

Joyce Carter, president of the Girls' Panhellenic Council, and Coleman Budd, president of the Boys' Panhellenic, announce that the sale of tickets is going well and that they hope soon to be able to complete the pavilion.

'MISSIE'S' OUT OF THE DOGHOUSE

Delightful Jennie (Mrs. Ed) Dorsey has a shiny, coal-black thoroughbred cocker spaniel who is just six months old and who was given to her by Halie (Mrs. Harry) Mehre, of Mississippi. Halie is the wife of that well-known football coach of University of Georgia fame.

Jennie, her husband and her dog, "Missie," which is short for Mississippi, live in one of the most attractive of houses, located in the rear of Laura (Mrs. Rufus) Dorsey's spacious stone residence on Peachtree road, overlooking a charming flower garden. For weeks Laura has been patiently waiting for the first bloom to appear on her favorite King Midas iris, which are bronze in color. The other morning she called excitedly to Jennie to come out and behold the spectacle, for two blossoms had appeared during the night. Jennie hastened to the garden, followed by her constant companion, "Missie." The two stood admiring the King Midases at length and finally, with reluctance, left them to their glory.

Imagine Jennie's humiliation and chagrin when, later in the day, she looked out of the window just in time to see "Missie" snip both of the heads from the iris stems. She rushed in to tell Ed and, quick as a flash, without breathing a word about the catastrophe to Laura, they began their search for a florist who grew iris and that particular variety. The quest was fruitless.

Suddenly Jennie recalled one other nurseryman who lived some five miles away, so off they started. When they arrived they found no King Midases, but another variety, Indian Chief, which closely resembles the former. Jennie bought two bulbs—blossoms and all—had them put in pots and took them home. They were presented to Laura with a little note which read: "I am bad but I am sorry."

It was signed "Missie."

Laura was pleased but distressed that Jennie had gone to such trouble about the flowers. She forgave poor "Missie," who hung her head in shame, and with her scissors cut the exquisite blossoms from the plants, took them into her living room and put one in each of two vases which contained six lovely purple orchids, sent her from the greenhouse of a very dear friend in Coral Gables, Fla.

WED IN IRIS TIME

Last Sunday evening Dr. and Mrs. T. C. Davison entertained at a buffet supper at their home on Valley road in compliment to those newlyweds, Dr. and Mrs. Ben Hill Clifton.

But it was not until the guests arrived that they discovered that the occasion marked the 14th anniversary of the popular hosts. The myriads of beautiful iris which Mrs. Davison cut from her gardens to decorate her home was responsible for the secret getting out. When the feminine guests exclaimed over their beauty and profusion, Mrs. Davison confided that they were her husband's favorite flower.

"In fact," she said, "when we became engaged and began to discuss the time for our wedding, it was Dr. Davison's idea that we be married when the iris was in bloom."

Accordingly, the ceremony took place on April 15. And as soon as the couple established a home, they began to grow iris. Needless to say, it is now not only their most favored flower, but their gardens are famed for their iris.

Dr. and Mrs. Hal Davison, brother and sister of the hosts, assisted in entertaining.
